Tate London Elected to Sealaska Board

Juneau, Alaska – Sealaska Corporation announced today the election of Tate London to the 13-member Sealaska Board of Directors. London, an Assistant United States Attorney with the Western District of Washington State, fills a Board term ending in 2006, previously held by Richard Stitt.

“Mr. London’s achievements in law and experience in American Indian issues will add depth to the Board,” said Sealaska Board Chair Albert Kookesh. “He brings with him a wealth of knowledge and a passion for his culture. We’re fortunate to have him.”

London, a Juris Doctor of Law graduate from Stanford Law School, has served in the United States Attorney’s Office in Seattle since 2002. He is a federal criminal prosecutor assigned to the Complex Crimes Unit which prosecutes conspiracies, bank, mail and securities fraud, and offenses involving Indian gaming. London is also the Tribal Liaison to the U.S. Attorney, working with representatives from 25 tribes within the district on issues from public safety to preserving the integrity of Indian gaming.

Prior to joining the U.S. Attorney’s Office, London was a partner in the law firm Cairncross & Hempelmann in Seattle where he represented a wide variety of clients including Sealaska. “I had the pleasure of working with Sealaska on a number of acquisitions including Alaska Native Wireless,” said London. “In addition to my professional connection, I have been an active Sealaska shareholder and have attended 15 of the last 17 annual meetings and several of the Heritage Institute’s biannual Celebrations.”

In addition to his JD Law degree London received an AB degree in Political Science from Stanford University and attended Willamette University in Salem, Oregon. “The scholarships I received from Sealaska while in college and law school helped me fulfill my educational and professional goals,” said London. “I have always wanted to give something back to our Native communities.”

London, an Eagle Killerwhale originally from Ketchikan, is the son of Sealaska shareholder Ernie Boyd. London lives in Bothell, Washington with his wife Debi and their four children Alyssa, Lacey, Kellen and Ellee.

Sealaska Corporation was formed in 1971 as a result of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act and represents 17,500 shareholders as the Southeast Regional Native Corporation. For additional information please visit www.sealaska.com.
